2. Applicant's arguments with respect to claim 21-26, 29-32, 35-37 and 41-50 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

1. Claims 21-26, 29-32, 35-37 and 41-50 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Piosenka et al (US005926756A) in view of Shanahan (US007149509B2).

Per claim 21, Piosenka discloses a method of transferring a plurality of personalized information from a first portable device having a first memory to a second portable device having a second memory (see column 1 and lines 67-column 2 and line 7, figure 1-4, inherently both computer device and portable device comprising memory), comprising steps of: establishing a connection between the first portable device and a computing device (see figures 1-4); transmitting a first set of one or more of the plurality of personalized information of the first portable device from said first memory to the computing device(see column 6 and lines 34 and 35); receiving a user selection of a second set of one or more personalized information to be transmitted to the second portable device (see column 6 and lines 55-60), wherein the second set is selected from the first set of one or more personalized information; establishing a connection between the computing device and the second portable device; and transmitting the modified second set of one or more personalized information to the second portable device (see column 6 and lines 30-60). Picoenka doesn't expressly teach receiving data field information from the second portable device wherein the data field information includes size information of one or more data fields, modifying the second set of one or more personalized information in accordance with the data field information. Shanahan teaches that device programmer (see figure 1, item 30) would evaluate the data information (use-defined information) that is received from programmable device (item 20) and determine whether the potential transferable information is compatible with the programmable device (e.g. the device programmer would covert CD format to MP3 format, see column 3 and lines 33-63) it would have been obvious to one ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to evaluate and modify according to the capability of the second portable device such that transmitted data would not exceed the capacity of the ending terminal.

Same arguments apply, mutatis mutandis, to claim 29, 35, 41, and 46.

Per claim 22, Picoenka further discloses that the personalized information includes phone numbers, message content, profile setting, and cell setting and service settings (see column 1 and lines 10-15, column 2 and lines 5-10).

Art Unit: 2618

Per claim 23, Shanahan further teaches that each of the first connection and the second connection comprised a wire-based data connection.

Per claim 24, Shanahan further teaches that the device programmer evaluate the second portable device's capabilities to receive the selected second set of personalized information (see column 3 and lines 44-53).

Same arguments apply, mutatis mutandis, to claim 30, 36.

Per claim 25, Picosenda further teaches that the first set of one or more personalized information is user selected (see column 6 and lines 39-47).

Same arguments apply, mutatis mutandis, to claim 31.

Per claim 26, Shanahan further teaches that each of the connection between the first and second portable device and computing device comprises a secure WAP session (see column 6 and lines 35).

Same arguments apply, mutatis mutandis, to claim 32, 37.

Per claim 42, Shanahan further teaches that the confirmation of the first data record is established (see column 6 and lines 35-41).

Same arguments apply, mutatis mutandis, to claim 47.

Per claim 43, Shanahan further teaches that the data storage specification include at least one of data filed size and a data type (see column 3 and lines 45-55).

Per claim 44, Shanahan further teaches that modifying the first data record in accordance with the storage specification including truncating at least a portion of the data first record (see column 3 and lines 44-64).

Same arguments apply, mutatis mutandis, to claim 48.

Per claim 45, Shanahan further teaches that writing command or send file command is executed after verification (see figure 10) and there is a chance that the file may already store in the programmable device (see column 11 and lines 21-32). It would have been obvious to one ordinary skill in the art to understand when a file is already stored in the storage the same file would be rejected at least would notify the user.

Same arguments apply, mutatis mutandis, to claim 50.

Per claim 49, Shanahan further teaches that MP3 file might convert to ATRAC file (see column 4 and lines 33-45). It is inherently that the size of file would be changed when such format is changed.
